The Charity Commission defines a trustee as:

Charity trustees are people who form the governing body or ‘board’ of a charity. They are the people with ultimate responsibility for directing the business of the charity. Most trustees are volunteers, and receive out-of-pocket expenses. Trustees work together to make the decisions about the charity’s finances, activities and plans for the future. Trustees give leadership and direction, and may employ staff. They need to prepare for and attend trustee meetings. A trustee might learn new skills, meet people who have a passion for a particular cause or issue, and feel that they are making a difference through the work of a charity.

Q3 To what extent do you agree or disagree with each of the following statements?

Table 21		Summary table
		Getting more young people on charity trustee boards would help charities to better engage with young people	Young people would be able to relate more to charities, if charities had more young people as trustees	Having an experience of being a charity trustee would improve my career prospects	Helping to run a charity would enable me to make a difference in society	If I spent some time as a charity trustee now, I would be more likely to support charities in the future	Charities would be more effective if they were better engaged with young people	I believe that charities would rather have middle aged or older people than younger people as their trustees.
