Q1. Although many services from the NHS are currently free there are charges for some things such as prescriptions and dentists. In order to save money for the NHS it has been suggested that patients should have to pay for some services. Would you support or oppose there being a charge per appointment with an NHS GP in each of the following situations?

Base: All respondents

Summary table

	Being charged £20 to help the Government tackle the budget deficit	Being charged £10 if the alternative was your local GP surgery closing	Being charged £20 if the alternative was your local GP surgery closing	Having the option to pay £20 for a guaranteed appointment with a GP the next day without waiting, even if it meant others who had not paid for an appointment had to wait longer	Being charged £20 for an appointment that provided higher quality of care than is currently provided	Being charged £20 for an appointment if the patient is in the upper income tax bracket (earning between £32,011 and £150,000 per year)	Being charged £20 for an appointment if the patient is in the highest income tax bracket (earning more than £150,000 per year)	Being charged £20 every time you had an appointment if it meant you paid slightly less tax
