Summary Table

Base: All respondents excluding not applicable

	Statements
	Volunteering to help a charity has made/will make me feel more valued in my retirement	I don't have enough activities to fill my days since retiring / I don't think I will have enough activities to fill my days once I retire	I think that volunteering to help a charity would help alleviate the boredom that can be experienced in retirement	I have been able to give less money to charity now that I'm retired / I will be able to give less money to charity once I'm retired	I would welcome a post-careers advice service which advises retired people on how they can best use their skills to help charities	The government should provide information illustrating how people in their retirement can continue to donate effectively to charity	I think that society undervalues the contribution that older people can make to their communities	There are so many charities it is difficult to decide which to give money to	Charities don't understand the financial and time pressures that people are under	I am worried that if I give, I will just be asked for more
