Q1. Which of the following statements do you think best describes the UK's current relationship with the European Union?	1
BASE: All respondents
Q2. The United Kingdom formally left the European Union on 31 January 2020. There is now a transition period until the end of 2020 in which the UK and EU are negotiating additional trade and other arrangements. The current rules on trade, travel, and business for the UK and EU will continue to apply during the transition period, and no new trade deals can be implemented until its end. New rules will take effect on 1 January 2021. In light of the above, to what extent do you think the current transition period from 31 January 2020 – 31 December 2020 is too long, not long enough, or the right amount of time?	4
BASE: All respondents
Q3. To what extent do you think that the transition period is helpful, unhelpful or makes no difference to the process of leaving the EU?	8
BASE: All respondents
Q4. As a result of the Coronavirus pandemic, there have been some suggestions that the transition period for the UK to leave the EU should be extended beyond 31 December 2020, into 2021 or beyond. Others say that the transition period should remain as already agreed between the UK and the EU, and end 31 December 2020, while others say that the transition period should be shortened so that it ends sooner than 31 December 2020. Any change to the transition period would require Parliament to agree. Which of the following statements best represents your view on the length of the transition period?	11

There is now a transition period until the end of 2020 in which the UK and EU are negotiating additional trade and other arrangements. The current rules on trade, travel, and business for the UK and EU will continue to apply during the transition period, and no new trade deals can be implemented until its end. New rules will take effect on 1 January 2021. In light of the above, to what extent do you think the current transition period from 31 January 2020 – 31 December 2020 is too long, not long enough, or the right amount of time?

Q4. As a result of the Coronavirus pandemic, there have been some suggestions that the transition period for the UK to leave the EU should be extended beyond 31 December 2020, into 2021 or beyond. Others say that the transition period should remain as already agreed between the UK and the EU, and end 31 December 2020, while others say that the transition period should be shortened so that it ends sooner than 31 December 2020. Any change to the transition period would require Parliament to agree. Which of the following statements best represents your view on the length of the transition period?
