Q2. A few hundred thousand of Hong Kong's citizens hold British National (Overseas) passports, issued to them before the handover of Hong Kong. These British passports do not carry the automatic right to live or work in the UK, even though they do give the right to limited diplomatic assistance. To what extent would you support or oppose each of the following actions for the UK government to take?

Q2. A few hundred thousand of Hong Kong's citizens hold British National (Overseas) passports, issued to them before the handover of Hong Kong. These British passports do not carry the automatic right to live or work in the UK, even though they do give the right to limited diplomatic assistance. To what extent would you support or oppose each of the following actions for the UK government to take?

Q2. A few hundred thousand of Hong Kong's citizens hold British National (Overseas) passports, issued to them before the handover of Hong Kong. These British passports do not carry the automatic right to live or work in the UK, even though they do give the right to limited diplomatic assistance. To what extent would you support or oppose each of the following actions for the UK government to take?
